

Weather page self-evaluation

I did this project in about four 4 – 6 hour sprints one phase at a time. First two phases were the hardest ones and I'm glad I did them well because that made phase five quite easy. Originally, I had own fetch functions for each view, but when doing phase five and specifically select signal part I realized it could be quite easy to just make one fetch function for frontpage, temperature and light. Last values view has own fetch function because it is different from other views.

Throughout this course I was more interested in backend than frontend especially I do not get any satisfaction doing the visual part with CSS. And it shows, after the backend was ready, I didn't have much interest doing the visual side. All in all, I'm happy with the end result and there was enough challenge in it that made it rewarding doing this project.
